ANOTHER TRAGEDY.

A Carnegie Employe Shoots an Unknown Man.

The Murderer Claims He was Attacked by the Fellow and Shot in Self Defense.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Nov. 15.—One non-unionist shot and almost instantly killed another last night in a bunk house of the Carnegie steel works here. The murderer is Max Newman, of New York, and the name of the victim is supposed to be Maynard. About 2 o'clock this morning the occupants of the houses were aroused by hearing two shots fired, followed by a cry of agony and then death-like silence. While the police were searching a man walked into the watch house of the mill police with a revolver in his hand and said: "I want to give myself up. I have shot a man." It was Newman and he conducted the officers to the log house where the victim of the shots was lying on the floor. "Therobe is. I think he is a striker," remarked Newman. A physician was called, but when he reached the mill the injured man was dead. A mill pass and check found on his person denoted that he had been a mill worker, but none know him to positively identify him. Newman was taken to the Pittsburg jail this morning to await the action of the coroner. He said: "I came from New York and have been working in the 32-inch mill. While sleeping last evening I was suddenly awakened by a severe blow in the face. I sat up, but was knocked backward by another blow. I jumped from the bed, seized my pants and ran around to the other side of the bunk. As I did so, I drew my revolver. My assailant dodged around after me and I thought I detected a gleam of steel in his hand. I cried to him to stand back or I would shoot. As he reached me I fired at the ceiling. This man then closed on me and struck me a stunning blow in the face. I fired and without a word the stranger dropped. Then he fell I ran out and gave myself up. I don't know who he is and don't recollect ever seeing him before." The bullet entered Maynard's brain from behind the left ear.

TO BE PARDONED.

Oscar Neebe, the Haymarket Riot Anarchist, to be Free.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—From a source absolutely authoritative the statement comes that Governor Fifer will place in the hands of Warden Dement, of the Joliet prison, on the morning of November 24 next, Thanksgiving day, a pardon for Oscar Neebe, the anarchist who was convicted of complicity in the Haymarket riot in 1886 and sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment. The pardon has already been prepared. Three days ago Louis Neebe, of this city was told that his brother's long imprisonment was almost over and to be prepared to accompany him home Thanksgiving day. The welcome news was authentic, coming directly from the executive chamber at Springfield. During the past two months tremendous pressure has been brought to bear on the governor in which old and valued friends, both political and personal, have been prominent. In addition to this were numberless petitions signed by nearly every prominent citizen in Chicago. The fact that the testimony on which Neebe was convicted was very weak is also said to have influenced the governor in his action.

LIKE WAR TIMES.

Three Hundred Mounted Farmers Ride Through the Streets.

GRAYSON, Ky., Nov. 15.—The citizens of Grayson are reminded of war times yesterday, when more than 300 mounted men entered the town and rode through the principal streets, followed by nearly as many on foot. The demonstration was caused by the railroad tax. Collector Peter Brown had levied upon some land and advertised it for sale yesterday at the court house door and the citizens of the county have risen in a body to oppose the sale. A committee waited upon Brown and he was induced to forego the sale and resign his collectorship, after which the citizens retired in an orderly manner to their homes. This settles the railroad tax question in Carter county as it will be impossible to find any one to accept the collectorship.

BROKE JAIL.

Seven Notorious Criminals are at Large.

LAFOYETE, Ind., Nov. 15.—A big jail delivery took place here last night by which seven notorious criminals secured their liberty. They removed the iron bars from a window on the lower floor of the county jail, which afforded them easy egress. Four other prisoners, confined on the same floor, refused to take advantage of the opportunity to escape. A large force was hastily organized for pursuit and the surrounding country is being thoroughly searched.

STILL ON.

The Rumor that the Homestead Strikers Had Given Up is Denied.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 15.—The rumor that the local Homestead advisory board has declared the strike off, is officially denied at the headquarters of the amalgamated association in this city.

Executed This Morning.

LONDON, Nov. 15. — Thomas Neil Cream, convicted for the murder of two girls, by poisoning, was this morning executed in the Newmarket jail. He was composed and met his fate with a stoicfirmness that has marked his every step through the trial and conviction. It is now known positively that Cream left no written confession. What he had to say to the chaplain had not been revealed except that he thanked the chaplain and the governor of the jail for their kindness before departing to the scaffold.

MURDERED.

The Profligate Son of a Prince Put Out of the Way.

The Reprobate Turns Against His Father and the Latter Accused of Complicity in the Murder.

VIENNA, Nov. 15.—Three Montegrins are on trial at Spalato, in Austrian Dalmatia, charged with having murdered a natural son of Prince Nicholas of Montegro. The name of the son was Grujico, and it was brought out in court that he had been a continued source of trouble to the prince. Grujico was supported by his father for many years, but he became dissipated in his habits and his demands for money were persistent. Prince Nicholas at length stopped his supplies. This was resented by the young man and he made every endeavor to annoy the prince and make him ridiculous before the public. He blackmailed and lampooned him and abused him openly in the public tavzars. Numerous family documents and satirical poems relating to the prince were written by Grujico and read in court in Cammara. It is hinted that the murderers were simply tools of others in committing the crime, and the Austrian authorities who have a liking for the prince of Montegro, on account of his pro-Russian sympathies, seem determined to bring out all the facts.

CONTESTED SEAT.

Kansas Wants Ballour Fired Out at Parliament.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The hearing of the petition to set aside the election of the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour to parliament as a member for East Manchester was commenced today before Justices Cave and Williams. Mr. Munroe, the liberal candidate, who contested the seat with Mr. Balfour, attributed his defeat to bribery and unfair methods on the part of the latter's agents, and has petitioned the court to declare Mr. Balfour's election invalid.

Known Nothing About It.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 15.—F. P. Wakefield, business manager for Margaret Mather, is here. He says that so far as he knows, there is not the slightest foundation for the report that Miss Mather has married Gustave Pabst, of Milwaukee.

A Depot Burned.

BROWNWOOD, Tex., Nov. 15.—The freight depot of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe railway, in this city, was destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss, $5,000, fully insured. Origin of the fire is unknown.

Four weeks ago, while Edward Cornelison, of Clinton county, was waiting his turn to pay taxes, he was seized of paralysis and fell to the floor unconscious. He remained insensible until his death on Saturday last. Mr. Cornelison was seventy years old and one of the valued pioneers of that section.

Jesse Sykes, of Vermillion county, while feeding his hogs, fell in an epileptic fit and was attacked by the swine. He was found by the family in a horrible condition, the flesh having been stripped from his thighs and other portions of the body. He lived but a few minutes. Mr. Sykes was seventy-five years old.

G. G. Baker some months ago established a paper at Bremen in opposition to one printed there for several years. His course seems to have given offense, as yesterday a white cap notice was tacked on his office door, warning him to vacate by December 25 and absent himself for the remainder of his life, or else suffer the consequences. Mr. Baker is very much alarmed over the situation and thinks seriously of complying.

There was an unusual subterranean explosion in a hollow on the Marshall Fulton farm, near Leesville. The rocky bottom of the brook was lifted several feet into the air, for a distance of fifty feet and more up and down the stream, finally subsiding to its old position. Farther back in the hill there was a rumbling noise which continued for fourteen hours, varied occasionally by loud explosions and the sound of escaping steam. The odor of gas was observable. The solid bed-rock of the stream was shattered for fifty feet and more, and huge slabs, several feet in circumference, were scattered on either side.

BLOODY MURDER.

Arthur Green Shot by John Phillips.

The Negro Attempted to Break Into the Phillips House and Gets a Load of Shot in His Brain.

About 9 o'clock last night Sheriff Viberg received a telephone message from the Centlivre brewery stating that a murder had been committed at the home of George Phillips, just in the rear of the toll gate on the Leo gravel road. Taking Deputy Sheriff Wilkinson with him he found the report only too true. Arriving at the home of Mr. Phillips the officers learned that John Phillips, son of George Phillips, had shot and killed "Bud" Green, a young negro well known in the tough circles of the city and well whom the police and constables have had considerable trouble.

Green's body was found lying on the south side of the house, just under a window, one of the panes of which was almost entirely demolished, with glass scattered all about him and his head lying in a big clot of blood.

At the Phillips home, besides the father and son, lived the only daughter and sister Ann, who is well known in police circles. Several years ago she married a man named Robert Beach and to them was borne one child, a little girl, who is now living in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Beach did not live in peace and about five years ago the husband left home and his wife claims he has never been heard of him since. She was wild and dissolute in her habits and it was not long until she was shunned by all respectable people. Her love for strong drink has often times placed her behind the bars.

About a year ago she began associating with a young negro of this city, Arthur Green, and finally became desperately infatuated with him, so much so that she would furnish him money with which to buy liquor and even to purchase wearing apparel. The father and brother objected to the attentions of the negro and used every effort possible to get the woman to eschew his company. This she refused to do and time and time again has she met him clandestinely at or near her home. He had been warned by Messrs. Phillips, father and son, to keep away from the woman, but this he refused to do and, it is said, has often threatened to kill either of them should they attempt to interfere in his little love affair. Only a few days ago Green met John Phillips on the banks of the old feeder canal and they had a quarrel, the negro threatening to drown Phillips, who is not a very large man. He said that if the old man and son would both be killed if they didn't stop their efforts to keep the daughter from him.

About three weeks ago Greene had a quarrel with Mrs. Beach and assaulted her. She was dragged several rods along the Lake Shore road by the hair and almost every stitch of clothing was torn from her person. Green was arrested and fined by Squire Wilkinson, but soon person signing the docket for the fine was released. Only a few days ago the negro's father, Noah Green, called at Mr. Wilkinson's office and paid part of the fine, $4.75. Sunday evening the couple had another quarrel and Green again threatened the lives of the Phillips family, father, son and daughter.

Last night, after, supper, John Phillips left home, as he generally does, and in a short time returned with a smoothbore rifle. The father, who is almost seventy-five years of age, has been ill for some time past, in consequence he retired early. Owing to the threats recently made by Green against Mrs. Beach and knowing the desperate character of the man, Mrs. Beach had changed her sleeping apartments from down stairs to a room above and John was to sleep in her room.

To a SENTINEL reporter he said: "It was not long after father and Ann had retired that I heard some person trying to gain an entrance through the window in the bedroom formerly used as a sleeping room by my sister. I knew it was Green, and stepping to my father's room told him that the negro was hanging about the house again. I had often heard that he was a desperate man, and thought if he gained an entrance to the house he would kill us. I grasped the gun and stepped into the bedroom and saw Green taking out pieces of a cracked pane in the window. When he saw me he muttered something about 'getting even' when he got in, supposing, of course, that I was afraid of him.

Presently he thrust his head through the window and I fired at him. He groaned and fell back to the ground. My sister rushed into the room when she heard the report of the gun, and asked me what was up, and I told her I had settled Green. Next I went out and became convinced that he was dead and going across, the road called Jeff Leonard, a neighbor. Together we went to Centlivre's brewery and telephoned the sheriff. We then returned to the house and remained there until the officers arrived and placed me under arrest. I think I was justified in shooting the fellow as he had been hanging around after my sister and had often threatened our lives."

"Was the gun loaded with buckshot?" asked the reporter.

"No sir. It was loaded with bird shot. I borrowed it from a neighbor. Green was a much larger man than me and if he entered the house I felt sure he would kill me. He thought I was afraid of him, that is the reason he was so brave about trying to enter the house."

The reporter next visited Mrs. Beach, who is in the women's department of the county jail. When spoken to in regard to the killing she said:

"I didn't know anything about it until I heard the report of the gun. I was upstairs sleeping and jumped up, and hearing a noise out doors raised the window and looked out. Green was lying on the ground making feeble struggles. I rushed down stairs badly frightened and John told me he had shot Green, who had tried to get into the house through my old bedroom window. He said Green threatened to cut his throat as soon as he got in. I was excited and don't remember exactly what occurred. When John wanted to go out and call the neighbors I objected, because I knew Green was treacherous and might be 'playing off.' I locked the door when my brother went out, because Green had told me that if he ever got hurt and had enough life left in him to do it, he would kill me. Only a short time ago he assaulted me, dragged me several rods along the railroad track, and tore almost all my clothes off me, even my stockings. See where he pulled me by the hair," and she turned and showed the reporter her back hair, which was matted with blood. "I had to borrow a comb to straighten it up. I think John had a right to shoot him, as he had so often threatened to kill all of us. What will the officers do? Can they do anything with me?"

When told that the reporter didn't know what would be done with her brother, but that her reputation would be blasted, she replied:

"I don't intend to stay here, anyhow. I couldn't live out there after seeing all that blood. I have a little goldenhaired girl in Chicago. How glad I am she isn't here. I don't think they can do anything with me, do you?"

The woman seemed to be much more concerned about her own welfare than that of her brother who did the killing. While worried about herself she didn't seem to care much else about the affair.

This morning the reporter visited the scene of the crime. The ground about six feet from the house was covered with clots of blood, intermingled with a mass of brains. From appearances it would seem that when shot Green fell over backwards, his feet toward the window. Sheriff Viberg says that when picked up he held clutched in his hand a stick, with which he had evidently been trying to raise the window. Only one pane, in the lower left hand corner of the window, was broken, and as he went downward eye like that of the reporter it looked as if it had been shattered with a load of shot. Scores of pieces of glass were lying about the ground and a few pieces yet rested on the window sill.

Mr. Phillips, father of the murderer, was in the barn at work when the reporter found him and inquired about the crime.

"I don't know much about him (meaning the negro). I never saw him but once to talk to him. One night about two months ago I stepped into the back yard and saw a man standing a few yards away with a big club in his hand. I picked up a brick and walked towards him. I saw he was colored, and having heard rumors about Green and my daughter, supposed of course it was Green. He wanted to know what I intended to do with the brick. I told him nothing that I knew of, and then ordered him from the premises and told him to stay away. He went. Once before, or just after the above episode, I am not certain which, Green got a key, and unlocking my house, entered it. I was awake and stepped to the bedroom door just as he lighted a match in the kitchen. I recognized him and ordered him out. He went away. These are the only times I ever saw him, although I have frequently heard of his threats to kill me and my son. Last evening after supper, John put on his coat and hat and left as I supposed for Centlivre's brewery or for town. After awhile he returned home with a gun which he said he had borrowed from one of our neighbors, Mr. Geisdoefer. I was suffering with chills and retired early. I had not been in bed long before John came to my door and told me that he thought that negro was skulking around the house again. He told me, I think, three times that the fellow was hanging around. Presently I heard the report of the gun and John called me and said he had shot Green. I didn't see the negro before or after he was killed, not daring to leave the house in my condition. This morning for the first time I looked out of the window and saw the bloody spot where he had died. The window pane was not out of the window yesterday. The deed is a terrible one, but Green's threats have been numerous to my son and daughter and I think John is justified in the killing. He is a widower, aged forty-four years, and has one child, Mrs. Lelia Umstead, who resides at Maysville."

"Was John drinking yesterday?" inquired the reporter.

"I don't think he had been drinking. All day he had been working on this box and cover for the hack, (and stepping to the north side of the barn she showed the reporter a fine new hack cover and box). I generally know when he has been drinking. That is his only fault, and I am convinced that he was perfectly sober."

The reporter next visited Mr. Ferdinand Geisdoefer, who lives about a half mile from the Phillips home. He said that last night John Phillips came to his house and asked for the gun, saying his father wanted to use it to kill a horse. Phillips, it seems, has never used a gun and asked Mr. Geisdoefer to load it, which he did. Before going to Geisdoefer's Phillips had tried to borrow a gun of Charles Houseman, another neighbor, but he hadn't any. Neither of these gentlemen knew aught of the crime until this morning. Mrs. Geisdoefer was greatly agitated, fearing that in some manner they might be implicated.

A call at the home of Noah Green, father of the dead man, who resides at 543 East Wayne street, found the mother suffering intense agony and the sisters in tears. The father had just left to arrange for the funeral of his son. Mrs. Green stated that they knew nothing of the terrible affair until this morning, when they were informed by a neighbor, Mr. Lordier. She said:

"Had Arthur lived until the 25th of next January he would have been twenty-six years of age. He was the oldest son in a family of six girls and five boys. Last December he commenced going with Ann and there has been trouble ever since. I didn't want "Bud" to go with her, but she hung after him and whenever times came to my house. One real stormy night who came here and searched the house for 'Bud.' She couldn't find him, and awakening me inquired where he was. I told her I supposed he was out with some young fellows and she then told me that she had searched the house, but couldn't find him and was certain he was over to Lon Somers and she was going over after see. She did, and searched that house. I told her to stay away and let 'Bud' alone, but she replied that if he couldn't go with her he couldn't go with anybody. Only a couple of weeks ago Ann had him arrested and he was fined. She told me she was put up to it by John (Phillips) and Mrs. Beach, and wanted to settle the fine so she was afraid 'Bud' would leave town and never send for her. If anybody bothered them she would kill them, she said. I wanted her to let him go to Muncie. No, she wouldn't listen to that unless she could go with him. Finally she gave Noah $5.75 and he went to Squire Wilkinson and paid part of the fine. Ann knew right where "Bud" was and immediately went and told him what she had done. When I reached home they were here and remained until 9 o'clock, when they went to my daughter's on Maumee avenue. From there they went to the Phillips home where, I suppose, Ann didn't want "Bud" until the next morning. I tried then to get him to promise to quit going out there, and he finally promised that he would. I often told him that if he didn't stop going out there he would be killed, but he told me that nobody would hurt him. Ann left the window open, and it wasn't open last night. I think they intended to get him into a trapand kill him. She has kept him from doing any work all summer and only a few days ago promised to buy him an overcoat. We have notified relatives in other towns of the terrible affair and the father has just gone down to make arrangements for the funeral. I haven't seen the remains of my boy, but we will try and have them brought to the house."

One of Green's sisters is lying very ill and she was deeply affected by the sad events of last night.

Coroner Kosler called at the jail at 1:30 this afternoon and took the testimony of John Phillips and Mrs. Beach and will complete the inquest at his office.

Constable Kelly served subpœnas on a number of witnesses for a preliminary hearing to be held this afternoon, but unless the coroner renders his verdict the hearing will be postponed.

No arrangements for the funeral have yet been made.

THE GOOD NEWS KILLED HIM.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 15.—Surprise and joy over Cleveland's election proved fatal to Edgar Brawner, an old democrat of Port Tobacco, Charles county, Md. He was seventy-two years of age and was in perfect health when he went to the polls and voted.

Wednesday he rode some distance to a telegraph station to hear the news of the election. As he was alighting from his carriage several friends shouted that Cleveland was elected. The old man leaped to the platform and raised his hat as he started to cheer. Then he fell backward and expired in the next moment. The shock had killed him.

A Pretended Prince Goes to Prison.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Frederick Evans, alias Helmhold, the pretended prince of Teck, has been sentenced to one year at hard labor. The authorities became assured, on investigation, that he was as much a knave as a fool. He is said to be of respectable American parentage and was formerly convicted of fraudulent practices in Liverpool.

His Second Campaign.

WANTS A DIVORCE.

A Wife's Alleged Cruelty to Her Husband.

John Zent Brings Suit in 'Squire Hays' Court for Divorce—Other Court Notes.

A sensational divorce case is on in 'Squire Hays' court but has not yet come to trial. It is the suit of John Zent, of this city, for divorce from his wife, Agathe. Zent's complaint alleges as grounds for his divorcement from his spouse extreme cruelty and inhuman treatment towards him by his (should be) better half. Zent also asks for the custody of the two children, one aged five and one three. The parties were married in 1886 and have lived together more or less happily ever since. Mrs. Zent was formerly a Miss Clutter, of Huntertown. Mr. Zent is a tinner by trade and was for a number of years connected with the city fire department. Some sensational developments are likely to come out during the trial.

Two warrants for boys were sworn out by an irate property holder in 'Squire Ryan's court this morning. The boys have been too handy with their jack knives, and tried to whittle down the aforesaid gentleman's fence.

Rief, the insane man now in the county jail, was originally put in on a charge of drunkenness, but his time on this charge has expired and he is detained until he can be sent back to Richmond. The papers will be forwarded in a day or so. Rief is an oddity and hopelessly insane. He spends most of his time munching tobacco cuttings, and dancing what Jailor Lindsey calls the chair dance. His relatives call to see him occasionally and bring him tobacco.

In 'Squire Franc's court the civil case of Benjamin Sanders vs. Samuel Dougherty is up for trial this afternoon.

There was no police court this morning. The night at police headquarters was particularly quiet.

There were various curious callers at the jail this morning to see Phillips, the man who shot Bud Green, and Mrs. Beach, his sister.

Morgan Chandler, through his attorney, ex-Judge Niblack, has filed in the supreme court his brief in the Henry county apportionment suit. Mr. Niblack claims that there is paralleism between the Indiana and Michigan cases, and says that the constitutional provisions in Wisconsin, Michigan and New York governing the apportionment of members of the legislature are different from those in this state. Precedents in the states named can not, therefore, be cited for Indiana. Anything like actual equality of districts, where the integrity of counties must be preserved, is out of the question. Mr. Niblack concludes that if greater restrictions are to be placed upon the making of legislative districts, it must be done through an amended constitution.

In 'Squire Wilkinson's court yesterday afternoon the suit of Mary L. Newhouse vs. Lizzie McClerren, mentioned in yesterday's SENTINEL, was called. The defendant was present with her witnesses but the plaintiff failed to put in her appearance. Her attorney was also absent and the 'squire dismissed the case at the plaintiff's cost. The original note given for the buggy was for $45, of which amount $5 was paid. Mrs. Newhouse did not see her way clear to show how the $45 note increased to $175.

DEATH'S SUMMONS.

Mrs. R. W. Blakesley Dies in Chicago—Other Deaths.

Mrs. R. W. Blakesley died at her home in Chicago yesterday. The remains will be shipped to this city for interment, arriving here tomorrow afternoon, on the Pittsburg train, at 2:45 o'clock, where they will be met at the depot by a hearse and a number of relatives and friends, and conveyed to the cemetery. Funeral services will be held at the late residence of the deceased, in Chicago, prior to taking the train for this city, and no services other than those at the grave will be held here. Rev. Boggs, or the Third Presbyterian church, will have charge of the funeral services at the grave. Mrs. Blakesley was the wife of ex-Conductor R. W. Blakesley, formerly of this city, and was well known here. Her husband, since leaving the train service of the Pittsburg, has been serving the company in its Chicago yards. Owing to the prominence of the bereaved family the funeral of the deceased lady will undoubtedly be attended largely by Fort Wayne's railway men.

This afternoon the remains of the son of C. M. Taylor will be returned from Ridgeville, Ind., for interment in this city. The remains were taken to that place last fall but the family changed their minds and decided to have the remains re-interred here. They will be taken to Lindenwood.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Emma L. Kramer nee Rayhouser, will take place from the house, No. 116 Fulton street, tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. and from the Tabernacle at 3 p. m. Pastor Northrop officiating.

Mrs. Minnie Levy, of Ewing, returning from Europe, passed her trunks through the custom house at New York, but at Cincinnati they were detained and $250 duty demanded. M. Rosenthal, a brother, of Ewing, interested himself in her behalf, but he forbade explanation why Mrs. Levy brought the goods to this country billed to Miss Minnie Joseph. Last week Mr. Rosenthal gave a bill of sale to his store at Ewing to Joseph Levy, ostensibly for $4,843.20, and left. His present address is unknown. A number of wholesale customers are said to have been left in the lurch.

HE WAS CAUGHT.

Postmaster Higgins Makes an Important Arrest.

John La Mar, An Employe at the Postoffice, Caught Robbing the Mails.

For some months past merchants in this city have been missing small sums of money from their mail and complaints were made to Postmaster Higgins, who at once began investigations. This morning the thief was caught.

It seems that for about two years past a young man named Adam LaMar has been employed at the postoffice as box clerk, and had other light duties. The young man was bright and quick and won the esteem of his fellow workmen. About a month ago De Wald & Co. and Root & Co., both missed some postal orders. Here Mr. Higgins got the first clew. He sent on to Washington to learn who had signed for the orders and discovered that they had been signed by LaMar. In explanation the young man said that the parties had called for the money after dark but he had signed in accommodation. This would not "go down" with the postmaster who wrote to Post Office Inspector Bearss, at Cincinnati, who sent Lawrence Leatherman, one of his deputies, to look into the matter. A trap was set for La Mar. In one letter was placed a $1 bill which was marked and in the other a marked 50 cent silver piece. The letters were addressed to Root & Co. The firm never got the letters and this morning the postmaster and inspector went out on a hunt for the boy. It was found that he had eaten his breakfast at Cline's restaurant, on Calhoun street, and had paid out the same one dollar bill. Mr. Cline had spent the money at Eckert's butcher shop and there it had been paid out to Mrs. Glutting, from whom Mr. Higgins got the bill by exchanging another dollar This was clear evidence of the boy's guilt and when he was confronted with the matter he weakened and confessed his guilt. He has taken only about $30 or $50. LaMar is the son of John LaMar, a highly respectable engineer in the employ of the Pennsylvania company. He lives on East Williams street. If the lad is under eighteen he will go to the reform school; if older, he will probably go to state's prison.

Postmaster Higgins regrets the matter exceedingly. He is in no way to blame and is to be commended for the efficient manner of catching the boy. Much sympathy is expressed for the lad's parents.

The boy is now in custody of Deputy United States Post Office Inspector Leatherman.

IS IT TRUE?

The Report of a Frightful Railroad Accident.

John Kelley, of this City, said to Have Had Both Eyes Blown Out.

This morning the report was circulated in the city that John Kelley, son of John Kelley, a boilermaker in the employ of the Pittsburg company, had been hurt at Chicago. It was stated that while working in the railway yards a locomotive had exploded killing two men, and blowing Kelley's eyes out. He was also hurt internally, and one arm was torn off. Kelley was raised in this city, and is well known. He was about twenty-five years of age, and at one time was a brakeman in the employ of the Pennsylvania company and later was employed by the Grand Rapids and Indiana company. His parents live on South Harrison street but had up to noon heard nothing of the accident to their son. The report was circulated here by a brakeman named Logan in the employ of the Grand Rapids road. There is some doubts as to the truth of the story for Mr. Logan heard the story from another Grand Rapids and Indiana employe who could not vouch for its correctness.

THANKS to the munificence of Charles T. Yerkes, Chicago is to have the largest telescope on earth. The gift is not only timely but appropriate. A large instrument would have been acceptable to any other city. Nothing but the very largest on earth would do for Chicago. The great school is now made strong in its only weak place, and is becoming a university indeed. By means of Mr. Yerkes' giant spyglass it will doubtless be possible to plot the moon out into suburban lots. If so, Mr. Yerkes should be granted the exclusive franchise to run cable cars between here and there.

THE WAYNE CLUB.

Its New Building is Rapidly Nearing Completion.

The Carpets and Furniture Purchased —A Description of the Interior— The Manager Selected.

Thirteen carpenters are now busily employed upon the interior of the new Wayne club building on Harrison street, between Berry and Wayne. By the 1st of December the interior work upon this fine building will be nearly, if not entirely, completed and the building ready for occupancy in a week or two later. The two lower floors of the building are finished in natural finish of white oak and the third floor in quartered southern pine.

Entering the wide door from Harrison street, a broad passage-way, paved with polished tile, leads to the general reception hall, or lobby, on the first floor, which is also paved entirely with tile.

In front and upon the left side is the manager's office, in which is an enunciator connecting with every room in the house. Directly to the right of the entrance is the gentlemen's smoking room and further to the right is a commodious billiard hall. To the left of the entrance is the gentlemen's parlor and beyond it the cafe.

The cafe will be a perfect gem of elegance. It is 25x19 feet in dimensions. Upon the north side of the wall will be a combination sideboard and mantle of delicately carved wood and plate glass. This piece of furniture alone will cost several hundred dollars. In the rear of the cafe is the wine room and to the left the mixing room.

Ascending the broad stairway of oak, with its polished paneling and dainty touches of hand carving here and there, one steps into the reception hall, over thirty feet square. Upon the second floor are three private dining rooms, a reading room whose dimensions are 35x19 feet, a card room 27x30 feet, a chess and cribbage room and the managers private room. Upon this floor is also the ladies private dining room and reception parlor. The reception parlor is reached by a stairway, and entrance from the south corner of the ball room and there is no connection to the ladies' apartments from below, excepting from the main stairway leading through the reception hall on the second floor. Upon the south wall of the ladies' parlor is a magnificent mirror seven and one-half feet long by four feet wide, unframed and beautifully draped. The mirror extends clear to the floor. To the right of the parlor is the ladies toilet rooms.

The ball room is upon the third floor and this is reached by a broad flight of steps. The dimensions of the ball room are 40x80 feet. There are two retiring rooms on the east side and four alcoves in front. These alcoves will be handsomely carpeted and provided with easy chairs. The walls are tinted and the floor is of polished maple. Sixty five incandescent electric lights will illuminate the ball room, which is the largest without a column in the city.

The kitchen and storage rooms are located in the basement and it is the intention of the club to put in baths in the basement later on. The club is heated by steam.

The furniture has already been purchased. It is furnished by Messrs. Nelson Matter & Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich. The total cost of the furniture and carpets is $3,000. It is upholstered in leather with the exception of the ladies' department, which is of silk tapestry and the gentleman's parlor which is in wool tapestry. The card room chairs were made especially for the club.

The carpets and draperies, costing $2,500, are furnished by Smith & Sanford, of Grand Rapids. In elegance the carpets are in keeping with the other details of the club house.

The manager of the club has already been chosen. He is late manager of the Peninsula club, of Grand Rapids, and is expected to arrive in Fort Wayne next week. The grand opening of the club will probably be held on New Year's eve. The total cost of the building when completed will be $36,000. There are now about 340 members. It is, beyond doubt, one of the finest club houses in the west.

TIME EXTENDED.

The Panama Canal Concession Lengthened One Year.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—The Figaro states that the United States of Colombia have extended the time of the Panama canal concession for one year, and urges the French government to abandon the idea of prosecuting the directors of the canal company. The matter will be discussed in the chamber of deputies on Thursday. This extension is regarded as a gracious act on the part of the Colombian government, considering that within a few months, according to the terms of the concession the vast work already done would have lapsed into Columbian hands. M. Hiebard is now placed in a better position to raised the 150,000,000 francs estimated as necessary for the completion of the canal, as doubtless a still further extension of time can be obtained if the Columbian government should be convinced that an earnest effort is to be made toward continuing the work.

HEART FAILURE.

The Warnings are Plain—Beware

The Boston Record, speaking of the death from heart failure of Senator Plumb, Senator Zach Chandler, Congressman Ray, Secretary Windom and scores of other prominent men who have died from the same trouble, asks: "What is this heart failure? Is there any escape from it, or is it the inevitable result of of the dangerously high tension under which so many of us are living."

No hour passes that some one does not drop dead of heart failure. The Record has struck the key-note of the cause, but there is a remedy. The first symptoms of this fatal disease may be slight, but do not fail to heed them if you value your life.

A nervous, weak, weary feeling, giddiness, swimming of head, strange, faint feelings, trembling, sinking sensation, coldness of feet and legs, fluttering or palpitation of heart feeling of apprehension anxiety, drowsiness daytime, sleeplessness nights.

Neglect of these symptoms will result in heart failure, spasms or neuralgia of the heart, or death.

The grip, owing to its weakening effect upon the nerves, has left thousands upon thousands of weak hearts in its train.

If you use the great nerve and heart remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, when the first symptoms appear, it will prevent heart failure. It is purely vegetable and harmless, and its use offers the only sure hope in curing this terrible disease and averting the fatal result. Druggists sell it for $1.00.

"I was troubled with heart disease. Some mornings I would be surprised when I awoke and found myself alive, for I expected a sudden death any moment. I bought a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and must say that it has rapidly brought me to health and strength. I have now taken four bottles and call myself cured, and I must certainly say that it is the most wonderful remedy for the nerves, brain and heart that has ever been discovered. J. J. CUMMINGS, 131 Main St., Brocton, Mass.

Dr. Greene, the successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic diseases, 35 W. 14th street, New York, can be consulted free, personally or by letter. Call or write him about your case or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter fully explaining your disease, giving advice, etc., will be returned free.

THIS DAY IN THE PAST.

1493—Columbus' two embassadors returned; they had visited the capital of a chief, a village of about 1,000 people, and had been well received, but could hear of no Cipango, Cathay or great khan; on their return they reported "they beheld several of the natives going about with firebrands in their hands and certain dried herbs, which they rolled up in a leaf, and lighting one end put the other in their mouths, and continued to exhale and puff out the smoke, whereupon the Spaniards were struck with amazement at this singular and apparently nauseous indulgence;" this the natives called tabac; syphilis appeared a few weeks later.

1730—Frederick Baron von Steuben born in Magdeburg, Prussia; came to America in 1778; died 1794.

RETURNS from all the counties in the state show a plurality for the head of the democratic ticket of 8,531.

PRESIDENT INGALLS, of the Big Four railroad company, is prominently mentioned for postmaster of Cincinnati.

IT looks very much as if the official figures of the vote of Ohio and California would give both states to Mr. Harrison.

PETITIONS are in circulation asking congress to create a department of roads similar to the department of agriculture. It is a good move.

HEBER STODDARD, republican, was elected sheriff of Porter county by three plurality, and now the democratic candidate is contesting his election.

W. E. RUSSELL, the democratic candidate for governor of Massachusetts, has been elected for the third term. What is the matter with Mr. Russell for our next democratic candidate for president?

CLEVELAND's plurality in Illinois, according to semi-official returns, with two counties missing, is 27,071. Altgeld, democrat, for governor, according to the same authority, has a plurality of 21,293.

VALPARAISO, the enterprising little city on the Pittsburg road, can take the wedding cake, dish and all. Mr. George W. Brown, aged ninety-four years, and Miss Hannah Lindstrom, aged twenty-seven, were married Monday in that place, after a courtship of seven years.

WHILE the present United States senate has a nominal republican majority of six, it has a majority of ten to fifteen in favor of tariff reform. Even Don Cameron, the republican leader of Pennsylvania, has expressed himself to be against the whole policy of the McKinley bill.

AT A political demonstration last night at Bloomington, over the newly elected vice president, Mr. Stevenson, in his remarks, said: "While as democrats we rejoice over the great victory we have achieved, we should not forget that we are all Americans. Democrats and republicans alike, we all have one country, one destiny. The glory which attaches to the American name and American achievements belongs exclusively to no party or section, but is the common heritage of all our countrymen. Nor should we forget that we are equally interested in having wise legislation and honest methods in government. I may be pardoned for saying that the campaign just closed has been singularly free from villification. This should be a matter of rejoicing to all men who place a high estimate upon personal character and who value the good name of those to whom are confided important public trusts. I take pleasure in bearing testimony now as I did, while the contest was yet undetermined, to the ability and high personal character of the gentlemen who were candidates for high office upon opposing tickets. In his great domestic bereavement the president of the United States has the heartfelt sympathy of all of his countrymen. It has been truly said that the late campaign recalled the era of good feeling which marked the administration of President Monroe. May we not hope that the great political struggle of 1892 between two eminent citizens, Harrison and Cleveland, and a dozen representatives of two great political parties will inaugurate a new era in American politics and that the calm discussion and respectful consideration for opinions of our opponents will characterize the presidential contests of the future."

The Electoral Vote.

Giving President Harrison the benefit of all doubts as to the official vote of Ohio and California, the vote of the next electoral college will be as follows:

Cleveland	268
Harrison	150
Weaver	26
Necessary to choice	223
Cleveland's plurality	118
Cleveland's majority	92

Headquarters To Be Kept Open.

The democratic state committee rooms in the Union block, says the Indianapolis News, are to be retained and kept open from now until the next campaign. "We shall begin to organize for the next battle immediately," said Secretary Reilly today. "Some one will be here in charge all the time, and by the time another election rolls around we will be in better shape than ever before."

The republican committee has been too much disheartened to consider what it will do. The rooms occupied in the Denison hotel during the campaign have been given up, and others have not been engaged.

Before leaving the city Chairman Gowdy and Secretary Milikan, of the republican committee, called at the democratic committee rooms, congratulated Chairman Taggart and Secretary Reilly, and had cigars with them over the result.

College Men in Business.

"This is suggestive of what college bred men are going to turn to in the future," is a remark Prof. Bell made at the celebration of the opening of the long distance telephone to Chicago a few days ago. There was a large company of famous electricians and brilliant financiers in that room, and every one of them was a college bred man. Pickernell, the engineer who had that long-distance plant in his head before a pole was laid, is a young graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Hall, the general manager, who is coming to be regarded as one of the geniuses of business organization, is a Yale man of comparatively recent graduation. Hudson, the president, who looks like James Russell Lowell, is a Harvard man, and there were practical men with degrees from Columbia, Princeton, Pennsylvania university and other colleges in such numbers as to suggest that no longer does the law or the pulpit or medicine exclusively attract college men.

Luxury in War.

Every fresh warlike appliance is rather more costly than the last. The United States has been making experiments with nickel steel, which may end in causing all the ironclads of the world to be clothed in that expensive material. In Germany the authorities have been experimenting with aluminum, and are seriously thinking of constructing the heavy equipment of the soldiers—sword-scabbards, cartridge-boxes, buckles and the like—of this metal. There is talk, too, of a corselet or breastplate of aluminum strong enough to turn a bullet at long ranges. Perhaps somebody will suggest silver helmets and diamond-pointed lances soon. The one consoling reflection is that with all these improvements and appurtenances the soldier will become so expensive that no government will venture to throw him away over a business so "destructive to garments," to use an Æschylean phrase, as fighting.

THE "safety" stoop is becoming universal. The almost invariable tendency of the bicycle rider is toward the "racing form," and if this is persisted in an upright man, physically speaking, will be an exception among us, and the "safety stoop" will become the rule. The "safety" bicycle is a practical machine, which the ordinary was not, but the safety has an influence upon its rider to stoop as in caressment which the "ordinary" did not possess to any marked degree. It is the opinion in certain quarters that the National Cyclists' union should incite the wheelmen to uprightness of carriage, which is next to uprightness of conduct, so that the threatened "safety stoop" may be nipped in the bud. The "stoop" is necessary in racing, where leg power is the great thing, but the human race can very well dispense with it.

THE old-time cowboys of northwest Nebraska are organizing a company to run a race from Chadron, Neb., to the Nebraska building at the world's fair grounds. The race will be on ponies, and a purse of one thousand dollars and a gold medal will be given to the winner. The race will begin May 15 and nearly three hundred riders will take part. In addition to the prizes named the contestants will contribute an entrance fee, which will aggregate several thousand dollars, to be divided among the winners.

THERE was something more than a flavor of humor and gallantry combined in a remark made by a Cincinnati judge to a middle-aged woman in court the other day, who, according to the Cincinnati Times-Star, told the judge she never would appear as a witness for fear the attorneys would ask her age. "Leave that to me, madam," said the judge, with his most courtly air; "if any lawyer in my presence asks your age, I'll send him to jail for contempt."

A NOVEL enterprise is run by a Montrose (Pa.) man who has a butterfly farm of one-fourth of an acre, set mostly over with flowers and small pools of shallow water, inclosed by a fence eight feet high of fine wire netting, where he had eighty thousand butterflies, of probably fifty different species, this year. In one corner of it is a glass house for their winter quarters. This is the latest fad to date.

A SAN FRANCISCO firm, it is reported, is about to attempt the revival of whaling in the Antarctic ocean, which has not been carried on for as many as twenty-five years. A quarter of a century ago the catches of sperm and right whales used to be excellent there, and many of the whalers are now of the opinion that the southern seas will again afford a profitable field for operations.

ALTHOUGH the old copper cart-wheel pennies of our boyhood are practically retired from circulation, it is estimated that 119,000,000 of them are still lying around somewhere in this country.

Worse Than Cholera.

The medical authorities both abroad and in this country are confident that it was not the recent visitation of cholera that was so much to be feared as the probably coming one of next spring. By that time the steamship companies can ignore their promise, having kept it for months when it did not cost much to keep it. In the spring the delayed flood of immigration will be enormous unless checked or stopped by the command of the federal government. We have quite enough immigrants, says an exchange, to last for another year at least, and an embargo on all foreign immigration for a twelvemonth would be desirable for many reasons, as it is not only the cholera immigrants bring with them to America. They bring moral pestilence and social evils which are worse than the cholera to a republic in which the most ignorant and vile is, after five years, as much a sovereign citizen as the wisest and most virtuous native-born is at any period of his life.

Deserving of Great Respect.

The teacher of the primary school, be she of high birth or low, should command the respectful admiration of every loyal citizen of our great republic. Hers is no small nor pleasant task, and in many cases she is a martyr upon the altar of her country. "Lift your hat reverently," says a writer in Colman's Rural World, "when you pass the teacher of the primary school. She is the great angel of the republic. She takes the bantling fresh from the home nest, full of pouts and passions—an ungovernable little wretch whose own mother honestly admits that she sends him to school to get rid of him. The lady who knows her business, takes a whole carload of these anarchists, one of whom, single-handed and alone, is more than a match for his parents, and at once puts them in a way of being useful and upright citizens. At what expense of toil, patience and soul weariness! Lift your hat to her."

THE intellectual part of the Columbian exposition, it is expected, will attract almost as much attention as the practical and it promises a magnificent contribution to the world's thought. The number to be interested in the intellectual part of the exposition is not so great as the number who will be attracted by the splendid exhibition of the world's material progress, but the congresses will not fail to command the earnest attention of millions of intelligent and thoughtful men and women the world over, and there can be no doubt that much good will result from them. Nothing in connection with the exposition will better illustrate the genius of the American people for planning and carrying to success great enterprises.

THE banks of Chicago are reported to have already taken $1,500,000 of the issue of $4,000,000 world's fair bonds. It is probable that $500,000 more will be taken by banks that have not yet subscribed. "It is not our desire to have all these bonds taken by banks," said Chairman Peck, of the finance committee, recently. "We had them printed as low as $100 to enable persons in moderate circumstances to make a good investment if they desired, and I believe later subscriptions will show a large number of this class."

NEVER before have the value and efficiency of quarantine been so strikingly displayed as in the handling of the cholera infected vessels in the New York harbor. That the country is free to-day from the ravages of this dreadful pestilence is thought to be due, not to the absence of dirt and refuse from the streets of its cities, but to the presence of extraordinary vigilance and skill on the part of federal and municipal authorities. For such precautions and prevention we should be profoundly grateful.

A NEW YORK butcher and his family are accustomed to take a ride in the butcher's delivery wagon every Sunday afternoon. He is a large and heavy man. His wife is almost his match, and his daughter weighs two hundred pounds. Appearing in all their finery on a recent Sunday, they could not account for the smiles of passers-by at their wagonload of good clothes. The smiles were occasioned by the legend in bold black letters on the side of the wagon: "Dressed Beef."

A CONTENTIOUS church member in a western town recently attempted to have his pastor disciplined for using the slang phrase "not in it" in the pulpit. But the bottom dropped out of his charge when the clergyman produced the manuscript of his sermon and produced this sentence from it: "In a word, my Christian hearers, the ark was a miniature world; there was no form of life that was not in it."

FOSSIL remains of the huge animals that inhabited the plains of eastern Oregon hundreds of years ago are being found in the Placer mine above Prairie City. A huge tooth several inches across the crown was picked up a few days ago, while early in the summer the immense skull of some ancient species of animal was found near the same place.

FROM the latest intelligence it is learned that the Mormon temple at Salt Lake City will be opened April 6, 1893. It has been in course of erection for forty years, has cost two and one-half million dollars and will be, without doubt, the biggest architectural nightmare in the country.

A matter of choice—whether to suffer uninterruptedly with a cough or buy a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and cure it.

ROSES.

The South wind is softly singing
To the roses here by the rill,
Violets and blue-bells are blooming
By the path to the old stone mill.

The South wind is softly singing
To the roses of evening still;
The whippoorwill's notes are falling
In the shadows there on the hill.

Roses, queen roses, tender and sweet,
Shatter them, dear, if you will;
When other fair flowers are blooming,
You will sigh for the roses still.

A BRILLIANT STAR.

"Der yo want a boy?"

Boyd, gazing at the floor, saw the most villainous pair of reddish-brown checked trousers upon which he had ever fastened his eyes. They were topped by a waistcoat of rich figured goods, a navy-blue frock coat, by far too large for the small boy who wore it, and a red satin puff tie that successfully concealed the shirt bosom.

"Na," began Boyd, curtly, "we don't—" He stopped; in the small boy's button-hole was a bunch of fresh violets that gave him a most incongruous aspect.

"Have you any references?"

"Naw. Never worked before," reluctantly admitted the applicant.

Boyd looked around warily. No one was observing him. He passed the boy pen and paper, saying, "Er—Write your name."

"Well, Murphy," scanning the writing that was not the unformed hand he had expected, "If you wish to try it for a week you may."

Murphy, with an alacrity pleasant to see, expressed his desire to do so, and was straightway installed in the office.

This was the only kind of a boy they had not previously tried. The boys who had been recommended as having every known virtue had miraculously lost them on entering their employ, so Boyd reasoned he was justified in thus engaging Murphy, though he felt a certain amount of responsibility.

Mr. Jewett, coming out of his private office, met Murphy, who had taken out the delayed mail.

"What are you doing in here?" he impatiently demanded, laying his hand on Murphy's collar, gently lifting him over the gate.

"You are, are you?" laughed Jewett. "Excuse me, but you see I had not yet been introduced to you."

"Me name's Murphy," announced the new boy, affably extending his hand. "P'r'aps yill remember it an do wages," pointing to the gate.

"Perhaps I will" responded Mr. Jewett. As he passed Boyd's window he said, "Just keep an eye on your protege, will you? He seems bright and may do, but his clothes and speech are against him."

Boyd kept not only one but two vigilant eyes on Murphy, but relaxed a little when he saw how he executed his duties. Murphy washed and filled ink bottles without direct orders, without thought to his gay attire. He was at all times willing to do more than was demanded, and the clerks, marking it, shrugged their shoulders cynically—it was too good to last.

On Friday evening as Boyd was passing Murphy's desk he saw him insert some words in a letter, then smilingly put it in its envelope. Boyd dropped a heavy hand on the boy's shoulder, asking sternly, "Why have you been tampering with the letter, Murphy?"

"Hain't been doingnothin'," averred Murphy, with a calm mendacity.

"Give me the letter," Boyd commanded so sharply that Murphy passed over the missive.

The words in Murphy's hand were two French words of the twenty that comprised Mr. Tyndall's vocabulary, without one of which at least he did not consider his letters complete, and which the stenographer misspelled with invariable precision. Murphy had corrected them! Boyd was considerably taken back.

"I read de letters ter get an inklin' ter do business, and w'en I got dere I wanted to see what dey meant and hunted dem up in de dictionary," explained Murphy.

"Just wait to take such an interest until you are given an interest," suggested Boyd, checking an incipient smile. He walked a few steps and then came back. "Murphy if you come up to my rooms I could give you some clothes. Of course I don't mean to insinuate anything against those you are now wearing, but you might like a change."

"Yo mean it all right, but no one's ol' close for me. Wait until termorrer, den yill see a change."

Boyd, feeling he had something for which to live, impatiently waited for morning. With a smile of conscious pride Murphy came down in apparel that at once won him the title of Count d'Orsay. The clerks in the neighboring offices dubbed him the dood of California street. Murphy bore his honors with modest equanimity.

He was soon a recognized authority on all sporting matters, for he had the records of pugilists, baseball players and horses at his fingers' ends. Every night he went to a different show of some kind—if not to Morosco's or the Wigwam to a fight or something equally exciting. To hear Murphy, with his splendid powers of mimicry, recall his escapades, was a dream of delight, and it became the habit of several of the employes to stay after office hours to watch Murphy dance and sing, for he could not be prevailed upon to exhibit during working hours.

He developed the finesse of a diplomatist in his dealings with canvassers, seekers after advertisements and beggars, impressing them with the uselessness of invading the private offices. It was through this skill the office nearly lost him. Murphy espied a burly man, with a newspaper package under his shabby sleeve, making toward Mr. Tyndall's office, and headed him off.

"It's orders, sir, ter fire' sen' in ye name. Will ye please ter give me yo car'?"

"Me good boy," in a rich brogue, "Why, shure, your name's——"

"Murphy," prompted the boy.

"Of course I knew you. Your father works in the park?"

"Yep."

"And your mother lived and died down on Clementina street?"

"Yep."

"Your sister still works in the fringe factory?"

"Yep."

"I'm not above recognizing old friends though I am a millionaire. How do do, Murphy? There is no telling what you would amount to if you didn't have such a foine taste in dress. Now, I'll go in for I am Misther Mertin."

The clerks who had gathered around allowed their suppressed snickers to grow into laughs as Mertin disappeared. In order to show he had no false pride, it was his pleasant custom to make believe he knew every clerk he addressed (outside of his own store) but this time evidently knew about what he was talking. He asked Tyndall how much he was paying Murphy, and on being informed said he would be worth $5 a month more to him. Such was the history of Murphy's raise. Murphy said he would not have worked for Mertin for double his present salary.

"Pey recognizes as I'm a gen'leman here and treats me like it; and I don't lower mesel' by working for anythin' but a gen'leman."

Murphy paid dearly for the ext a money, however, for in the bits of family history revealed by Mertin the clerks found rare material. Each morning some half-dozen men would anxiously inquire after Miss Murphy, hoping her health was not being injured in the close atmosphere of the fringe factory, which in time became a tom-to-can fa tory. Through all the chaff Murphy retained his good-nature.

But one morning the office opened and Murphy failed to appear. Ten o'clock came; still no sign from Murphy.

"He didn't spot the winner and has gone off with the stamp-box," observed the under bookkeeper.

Boyd turned upon him quickly, indignantly.

"You can't expect much, considering his family," somewhat shamefacedly.

The routine work went on, but there was a gloom hanging over the office. At 2 o'clock in came a messenger in whom they recognized one of their quondam office boys.

"Have you been on the way here since early morning?" asked Boyd, opening the note.

It was from Murphy. He had been struck by a dummy on his way home from a fight, "but ye don't haf ter sen no flowers, fer I ain't knocked out on dis trew," he ended.

They rushed for the newspapers and eager eyes found the short account of this new victim of the "deadly dummy." It gave his name as Murtry, but such mistakes are common. The boy had been removed to his home; there was but small chance of his recovery.

"He always fixed the letters when I wrote Ogden, California," faltered the stenographer, with a suspicious mistiness about her eyes as she turned away.

All had a good word to say for Murphy and went about their work in a half-hearted way. They read Murphy's note twice over, hoping to gain some comfort, but felt that he had made too light of the accident.

Shortly before 5 the office began to look deserted. Most of the men wished to get shaved before going to dinner parties or theater; some went to pick out suits while it was still light. A quarter past 5 found Boyd alone. He closed up, then went to his florist's. "Violets" were scarce that day, he had to go into two stores before he could get any. He took the California street cars and, looking for Murphy's number, rode so far he thought his young friend already lodged within the cemetery gates. He stopped before a neat cottage, pulled out Murphy's note, then rang the bell; it was answered by a young lady.

"Excuse me," murmured Boyd, hat in hand. "I see I have made a mistake. Can you tell me where a family named Murphy lives? The father works in the park."

"And the sister in a fringe factory? If you walk in, I think my brother can tell you."

So Boyd followed her into a room in which lay Murphy surrounded by an admiring group composed of men from the office. The table was laden with violets—"enough for a funeral," said Murphy.

"I am glad to see you so well, Murphy," stammered Boyd.

"Murtry," laughed the bookkeeper.

"You see Mr. Boyd, if I had corrected you that day you would have thought my hand too illegible and would not have engaged me. Besides Murphy harmonized with my choice language, and I had to talk that way to live up to my clothes. I couldn't afford new suits, and a cousin with a remarkably foine taste in dress," mimmicking Martin, "kept me supplied."

"How about the fights and Morosco's?" inquired somebody.

"He read of them in the papers and planned what he would tell you when he came home from night school," put in the pretty sister. "I did not like him to wear those clothes but we have to be economical for we two are alone and he did not wish me to work—in the fringe factory," she added cruelly.

"Naw," said Murphy, weakly, "not while I kin take care of ye."

The cable company came down handsomely for the injury done Murphy, and he has discarded the cousin's clothes. Confusion reigns at Tyndall & Lewett's—there is a new office boy pending Murphy's recovery. —San Francisco Examiner.

Famine and Disease.

One of the most engrossing things of late in New York has been the cholera and what they are doing at Quarantine to prevent its entrance into the city. With this dread disease knocking so urgently at our gates, it may be interesting to learn what men known for careful scientific research are disposed to say as to its origin.

Mr. Geo. W. Dunn, president of the Standard Chemical works, says: "The principal cause of this appalling disease is the failure of the Russian crops last year. Our minister at St. Petersburg, the Hon. Charles Emory Smith, states that there are from fourteen to sixteen million of people in absolute want of the necessaries of life and dependent upon measures of relief for continued existence." He also says: "The area over which the famine prevails is ten times as large as the State of New York. It contains a population of more than thirty millions. More than one-half are in utter helpless destitution, without food and without means of getting it. There are other millions who are reduced to abject penury and who can sustain themselves only in the most precarious way, and when to this region of gaunt hunger we add the ravages of disease, the epidemic of typhus, the suffering from the severities of a specially rigorous winter, the decimation of stock and destruction of material, and the consequent difficulties of recuperation, we have a picture of widespread distress which can hardly be overdrawn."

With such a state of things existing in Russia, and added to this the brutal efforts of the Czar to drive these of Jewish religion out of his domains, it is no wonder, says Architecture and Building, that this disease is scattered through the ports of Europe and that it is threatening the whole civilized world.

The Advertising

Of Hood's Sarsaparilla is always within the bounds of reason because it is true; it always appeals to the sober, common sense of thinking people because it is true; and it is always fully substantiated by endorsements which, in the financial world, would be accepted without a moment's hesitation.

For a general family cathartic we confidently recommend Hood's Pills.

Why is it that some houses always need re-painting?

A neighbor's always looks fresh, clean, and newly painted, and yet is not re-painted oftener than every four or five years.

Fifty years ago the following report of a thrilling experience was published: "With a load of thirteen tons, including many passengers, Mr. Stevenson's engine, the Rocket, traveled at the rate of fifteen miles an hour, and the engine of Braithwaite & Erickson, of London, moved at the astonishing speed of twenty-eight miles an hour. 'It seemed, indeed,' said a spectator, 'to fly, presenting one of the most sublime spectacles of human ingenuity and human daring the world ever beheld. It actually made one giddy to look at it and filled thousands with lively fear for the safety of the individuals who were on it, and who seemed not to run along the earth, but to fly, as it were, on the wings of the wind. When in the vehicle,' he continues, 'nicely poised on springs, and covered so as to exclude the external current of air created by its motion, you might imagine you were in a state of perfect rest while you are flying along the surface with the speed of a racer. In daylight and with good arrangements, traveling in the steam coach at twenty miles an hour, may be much more safe, as well as pleasant, than in any ordinary stage coach at eight or nine.'"

LITERATURE AND LIGHTS.

The Young Lady Had Difficulty in Doing Business With the Butcher.

The young lady was evidently more accustomed to visit book stores than meat markets and she was excessively absent minded.

"I've really forgotten what mamma told me to get," she said with a confused little laugh and a helpless glance about the shop where the various kinds of meat were exposed.

"Your ma gets lamb some Tuesdays," said the butcher, by way of suggestion.

"There!" exclaimed the young lady. "I've been trying all morning to recall the name of the editor of a certain magazine, and you've mentioned it. It's funny I couldn't think of Mrs. Lamb. I know the name as well as I know my own. I'm ever so much obliged to you.

She was going out, but she stopped when the butcher ahemmed in his throat and asked if it was a lamb she wanted.

"Yes," she said. "Mrs.—O! You mean did mamma want lamb. N-no. I don't think she did. Dear! I'm so forgetful. What are those things that your boy is doing up?"

"Those! Them are lights. Some people like 'em, but I guess your mother wouldn't want 'em, hardly."

"I suppose not," said the fair customer in a voice that indicated a far-away mind. "I do just think," she continued, speaking more to herself than to the butcher, "that Barrie's stories of the Auld Lichts are the sweetest things!"

"Lights ain't so terrible sweet," said the butcher. "Mebbe it's sweetbreads your ma wants—or a nice soup bone, perhaps."

The young lady looked up.

"I don't suppose you have time to read many books," she said, thoughtfully.

"Well, no'm to tell the truth, I don't."

"What you said reminded me of Allen's 'What's Bred in the Bone.' It's very good I think. Are those spring chickens hanging in the window?"

"No'm; those are Philadelphia capons."

"There!" cried the young lady, with an expression of delight, "that's what mamma wanted. You may send six of them. She called them Philadelphia squabs but I suppose they are the same thing."

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE IN 1893.

It would be hard for a person who cares for good reading to make a better investment than a year's subscription to The Century Magazine. No region is too remote, no expense too great, if it will only produce what the Century's readers want. This is the policy that has made it, as the Pall Mall Budget, of London, says, "By far the best of magazines, English or American."

The November number begins a new volume and contains the first chapters of a powerful novel of New York society, called "Sweet Bells Out of Tune," written by Mrs. Burton Harrison, the author of "The Anglomaniacs." In this story the fashionable wedding, the occupants of the boxes in the Metropolitan Opera House, the "smart set" in the country house are faithfully reflected, and the illustrations by Charles Dana Gibson, Life's well known cartoonist, are as brilliant as the novel.

In this November number begins also a great series of papers on "The Bible and Science," opening with "Does the Bible contain Scientific Errors?" by Prof. Shields, of Princeton, who takes decided ground that the Bible does not contain scientific errors of any moment, and who most interestingly states the case from his point of view. Other articles in this series will include one in the December (Christmas) number, "The Effect of Scientific Study upon Religious Beliefs."

An important series of letters that passed between General Sherman and his brother, Senator John Sherman, is also printed in November, which number contains also contributions from the most distinguished writers, including an article by James Russell Lowell, which was not quite completed at the time of his death. The suggestion which Bishop Potter makes in the November Century as to what could be done with the world's fair if it were opened on Sunday, is one which seems the most practical solution of the problem yet offered.

The December Century is to be a great Christmas number—full of Christmas stories, Christmas poems and Christmas pictures—and in it will begin the first chapters of a striking novel of life in Colorado, "Benefits Forgot," by Wolcott Balestier, who wrote "The Naulahka" with Rudyard Kipling.

Papers on good roads, the new educational methods, the city government are soon to come.

Four dollars will bring you this splendid magazine for one year and certainly no cultivated home can afford to be without it. Subscribers can remit directly to the publishers, The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York. They should begin with November, and so get first chapters of all the serials, including "Sweet Bells Out of Tune."

How a Parson Swore.

They look pretty closely after the daily walk and conversation of their clergy down in Ohio. A story comes from thence of the deacons calling on the pastor with the complaint that he swore. The good man was dumfounded and asked for a bill of particulars, whereupon it was explained to him that the week before he had gone fishing with a worldly man and when the latter yelled, "Parson! I've a d——d good bite!" the good man responded cheerfully, "So have I."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Little Nell—Me an' Jennie an' Mable had a awful nice dinner with my new tea set. Aunty—You did? And what did you have to eat? "Soup." "Real soup?" "N-o, it was only pretend soup, but (brightening) it was made out of city water wot wasn't filtered."—Good News.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.

A Close Match.

"Did that engagement of Hawdins and Miss Hicks end in a tie?"

"No. It ended in a draw. She drew out."

Skin Diseases.

What spectacle is more disgusting than that of a man or woman with a skin disease which shows itself in pimples or blotches on hands, arms, face and neck? It is simply impure blood. See what Brandreth's Pills did for a chronic case:

George Chapman, Pincening, Mich., says:

"For four years I was in the Mounted Infantry in the U. S. army, residing during that time principally in Texas. Almost all of that time I had a chronic skin disease, characterized by an eruption over the entire surface of my legs and thighs, arms and chest. The doctors termed it eczema. I had given up all hopes of ever being cured, when Brandreth's Pills were recommended to me. I concluded to try them, and I have thanked God daily since then that I did so. I used them for about three months, and by that time was completely cured, and have never had any trouble since."

A Canal Reopened.

Health is largely dependent upon a regular habit of body. The bowels act as an important canal for the carrying of waste matter off the system. They, together with the kidneys and pores, are outlets for debris whose presence is fatal to the body's well being. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is no violent purgative, but a gentle laxative admirably adapted to the wants of the constipated. It never gripes and wrenches the intestines as all drastic cathartics do, but produces an action akin to that of an effort of nature. Biliousness, indigestion, with their associate manifestation, costiveness, are speedily and completely remedied by this fine corrective, which also conquers malaria, sick headache, kidney and rheumatic trouble, and checks premature decay.

A very important meeting of the local union of the Christian Endeavorers of Fort Wayne was held yesterday evening in the Congregational church. The next meeting of the local union will be held Monday evening at the First Presbyterian church.

Word has been received in this city announcing the accidental death at Stockton, Cal., of Charles G. Barthold, formerly of this city. Deceased came to his death by a shock of electricity received while at work for the electric light company of that place. Barthold was at one time in the employ of the Fort Wayne Electric Light company. His father is Alex Barthold, who lives west of the city, on the Illinois road. The funeral was held at Stockton yesterday.

On Wednesday, Nov. 16, Mr. Richard Golden will return and present his charming rustic play, "Old Jed Prouty," at the Masonic Temple. 'Old Jed Prouty" has been seen here before and has been considered in these columns, therefore it is not necessary to dwell at length upon it or Mr. Golden's impersonation of its leading character. It is a pleasing, healthful, interesting play of New England life and Mr. Golden reproduces in an artistic manner a real character, a man who lived, and, it is said, a man whom he knew well and liked well, a man who was a perfect type of a certain kind of New Englander. The homelike surroundings and rustic scenes present a really pleasant picture.

A week or so ago a wager was laid between a republican and a democrat to the effect that the party who won the election should provide a dinner for the loser. Therefore, Sunday at 10 o'clock a select party gathered at the residence of J. H. Kinkead, 79 West Third street, and at 1 o'clock sharp all the republicans were seated around the board, which was weighted with all the sumptuous viands the season would provide. Each of the following present wore a mourning badge around the left arm but were exceedingly merry in the absence of any corpse: Mrs. Mary Noecker, Milly Noecker and Mr. and Mrs. James Noecker, Mrs. Ruby Conklin, Mrs. H. Friend, Maude Noecker, Hillery Hitchings, Mary Dolan and host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. H. Kinkead.

She left for Fort Wayne this morning to begin a second term work in the conservatory of music.—Miss Maud Miller returned to her school in Fort Wayne yesterday after a short visit with her parents."

The Huntington Herald says: "Prof. Reid, of Taylor university, Fort Wayne, delivered one of the ablest lectures of the series at the M. E. church, Saturday night. His subject, 'The Hymns We Sing,' was treated in a masterful way and the lecture was listened to with marked interest by a large audience. He delivered two discourses at the church on Sunday and distributed envelopes in the congregation for contributions to the faith fund of the university which is to educate missionaries. Mr. Reid is scholarly and deeply interested in the spread of the gospel."

The opening of the Columbia Literary club occurred last evening, in the finely furnished club rooms on Clinton street. A program had been prepared by the the members which was carried out with great success. The features of the exercises were the guitar and banjo selections by Louis and Russell Reed, and the humerous recitation by A. Schoenbien and others. The opening address was delivered by T. C. Dodane. The officers of the club are Fred Noll, president; Fred McEvoy, vice president; Louis Reed, secretary; T. C. Dodane, treasurer.

Fisher, the south side gunsmith, spent Sunday in Fort Wayne. —Harold Gutherle and wife spent Sunday in Fort Wayne.—Ed. Griffith went to Fort Wayne today noon."

The democrats of Huntington held a grand jollification meeting last night. Early in the evening the country people began to arrive in the city from all directions. Some had large dinner bells arranged on their wagons and kept them constantly ringing; others were loaded with people, each of whom blew some kind of a horn, the noise of which could be heard for miles around The arrangement committee, consisting of ex-Sheriff John Kintz, Jule Dick and one or two others, deserve much praise for the manner in which the program was carried out. The line of march was a long one and on either side of the streets could be seen fine decorations, fire displays, etc., all of which was a credit to Huntington county democracy. Hon. A. N. Martin, who was the principal speaker of the evening, was well received.

The new church, known as "Christ's Evangelical Lutheran Church of the General Synod," was fully organized at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last Sabbath. There were in all fifty-four who signed the constitution of the new organization as charter members, and were received into the fellowship and communion of the church. Several families of children were also baptized. The following officers were elected: Elders, Jacob H. Keil and Joseph Merillot; deacons, George W. Puff and Charles A. Singry. Rev. J. S. Nelson was also chosen pastor. The Lord's supper was then administered, Rev. L. A. Gotwald, D. D., of Wittenberg, of the Theological Seminary, Springfield, Ohio, officiating. In the evening an enthusiastic Y. P. S. C. E. was organized, with officers as follows: President, William H. Myers; vice president, Miss Stella Nelson; secretary, Miss Maud Merillot; corresponding secretary, Miss Rena B. Nelson; treasurer, Mr. Charles Boshler. After a most excellent sermon by Rev. Gotwald, Rev. Nelson was publicly installed pastor of the new church, which starts out upon its mission of saving souls under very favorable auspices. The services were all well attended and deeply impressive and helpful.

THE RECEPTION

Given Last Evening by Judge and Mrs. Zollars.

A swish of silken skirts, a flourish of fans, the hum of many voices and the pace was set yesterday for the winter gayeties in Fort Wayne. The election is over, society has taken up the flag and the signal will bring out receptions, luncheons, card parties and the round of gaieties suitable at this season of the year.

Judge and Mrs. Allen Zollars gave a magnificent reception yesterday from 4 to 6, 7 to 9 and 9 to 11 o'clock in honor of their silver wedding anniversary, although the guests were not aware that the occasion was the celebration of an anniversary until they met their host and hostess in the brilliantly lighted parlors and were apprised of the fact. Hearty, indeed, were the congratulations which followed. The decorations were entirely of chrysanthemums and smilax. The "beauties" in many shades of red were arranged with artistic inaccuracy on the table and piano and the mantel was banked with "mums" of yellow and white, outlined with smilax.

The chandeliers were tastefully draped with similax and yellow roses. Standing in front of a bank of palms, ferns and beautiful chrysanthemums, Judge and Mrs. Zollars received their guests, assisted by Mrs. Henry Graffe and Mrs. Charles Taylor. Mrs. Zollars received in a gown of gray bengaline, trimmed in cut steel; diamonds were worn and a large bunch of yellow chrysanthemums carried. Mrs. Henry Graffe wore brocaded silk and diamonds. Mrs. Charles Taylor's gown was of black bengaline. In the dining room, which was tastily decorated with roses and yellow chrysanthemums interwoven with feathery vines, Seidel served a very dainty luncheon. Among the guests were the Hon. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. O. McClellan, of Auburn; Mr. and Mrs. Charles McClellan, of Washington, D. C., and Messrs. and Mesdames P. A. Randall, James Woodworth, Thomas Jackson, S. B. Bond, Charles Worden, James Wilding, Thomas Meegan, H. C. Graffe, Rosser McClure, J. W. Bell, Edwin Evans, C. M. Dawson, G. Shepler, Charles Taylor, N. R. Leonard, C. W. Pyke, O. P. The Art League meets this evening

IT is doubtless true that no musician of prominence who has lately been before the American public has enjoyed a wider or more genuine popularity than has Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore, the conductor. It was popularity well earned. In a new and graceful sense of the hackneyed phrase, he "strove to please." Ignoring pedantic criticism and fetichism of "schools," he compiled his varied, brilliant, lively, and refreshing concerts from all sources. And the obvious aim of this heterogeneous programme-making was the pleasing of the people. If his judgment told him the people would like a Wagner overture or a potpourri from Italian opera, the overture and the potpourri were what he gave them. And if he thought they wanted a jocular medley of the street songs which happened at the time to be living a short week of fame, he gave the medley and plenty of it—with encores. His band, splendidly equipped and disciplined, was versatile and daring enough for anything. It is idle and quite irrelevant to claim that he did not "maintain a standard of art." No doubt he himself would have answered that a standard which is too high for the publice is too high to be of any practical use. His object was to please, to amuse, to lighten the heart and refresh the weary. No other baton-holder who has ever stood before an audience has felt between himself and his hearers the existence of a stronger bond of mutual confidence and sympathy. His death eclipses the gayety of the goers to concerts.
